SPARKLING WINES

Only sparkling wine made in the Champagne region of France may be called Champagne. South African sparkling wines made in the traditional French method (methode champenoise) are referred to as Methode Cap Classiques or MCC's. Wine that has been impregnated with CO2 bubbles is simply termed sparkling wine whereas MCC's undergo a second fermentation in the bottle to create the sought after bubbles. Prosecco is a sparkling white wine from Italy.

CHENIN BLANC

Chenin Blanc was born in the Loire Valley in France; with reports tracing the white wine grape back as far as the 9th century. Many believe that in 1655 Jan Van Riebeeck took the grape vines from France and first planted the grape at his home vineyard in South Africa. Chenin Blanc is a zesty and crisp wine.

ROSÉ WINES

A Rosé is a type of wine that incorporates some colour from the grape skins, but not enough to qualify it as a red wine. It may be the oldest known type of wine, as it is straightforward to make. When Rosé wine is the primary product, it is produced with the skin contact method. Black-skinned grapes are crushed and the skins are allowed to remain in contact with the juice for a short period, typically one to three days. The must is then pressed and the skins are discarded, not left in contact throughout fermentation as with red wine making.

BLENDS

A blended red or white wine uses more than one varietal, or type of grape. One varietal serves as the main anchor for the wine, and at least one other varietal tweaks the outcome. The resulting blended wine is more complex and interesting as it pulls in characteristics from multiple varietals.
